Battery Education

What are the differences between battery types?
In simple terms, batteries come in two basic types: single-use and rechargeable.

Single-use batteries, also known as primary batteries, have one life cycle and must be replaced when drained. Examples include alkaline, carbon-zinc, lithium, silver-zinc and zinc air.

Rechargeable batteries, also known as secondary batteries, can be recharged and used repeatedly. Examples of rechargeable batteries include nickel-metal hydride (NiMH), nickel cadmium (NiCd), lithium ion (LiIon) and sealed lead acid (SLA) batteries.
